Missionaries of the Week

☞ Josh & Natalie Perkins, Papua New Guinea, write, "In January, Natalie started having severe gallbladder troubles. This is not new...but up until now she had been able to manage with diet and lifestyle choices. But life in PNG is not accommodating to special diets or needs...So the beginning of February found us in Cairns (Australia) with a full schedule of medical appointments...the gallbladder needed to come out and Natalie had no complications...Through the many doctors' visits, I was able to find out that some health struggles I have been having for months now are possibly linked to an amoeba I picked up...we were advised to stay in Australia for an additional two weeks as Natalie's recovery time and my infection were dealt with. We just now returned to PNG and are currently (March 24) in Goroka getting supplies for a few coworkers before flying back into the bush..."
